US removes country cap on Green Cards

WASHINGTON: The US lawmakers passed a Bill aiming at lifting the current seven-country, five-year ban on issuing Green Cards, a development which would benefit thousands of highly-skilled Indian IT professionals.

A Green Card allows a person to live and work permanently in the US. Passed by the US Senate on Tuesday, the bill removes the current seven-country, five-year ban on issuing Green Cards to favour Indian professionals and families. It also eases the current employment-based immigration laws by reducing the number of such visas.

The bill would also establish transition rules for employment-based visas from FY 2020-21 by reserving a percentage of 50 per cent for Indian professionals and families with advanced degrees or extraordinary ability. It also reduces the employment-based cap on employment-based companies by cutting by 25 per cent. Additionally, it removes an offset for US companies to allocate 100 visas for Indians from countries other than the two countries that get the largest number of such visas.

As per another provision in the bill, the country caps for first-country, in the second-country category would be abolished in total, and the country caps for the third-country category would be abolished in total.

The Department of Homeland Security, however, has said it does not support the Bill. “This bill would move to nothing the current employment-sponsored system toward a more merit-based system,” said Joseph S. Ihde, Assistant Secretary of Homeland Security, in a message to Congress.

On Tuesday, the bill was passed by the 435-member House of Representatives by a vote of 365-65 votes.

As per the present system, out of the total number of family-based immigrant visas to be given by the US, 140 visas are given to people of a country if a country can be a maximum of seven per cent of such visas. The new Bill would increase this to 140 visas for people of a country if a country can be a maximum of seven per cent of such visas.

Dengue fever, also known as breakbone fever, is a viral infection that can lead to severe flu-like illness. It is caused by four different viruses and spread by Aedes mosquitoes. Symptoms range from mild to severe. Severe symptoms include dengue hemorrhagic fever (DHF) and dengue shock syndrome (DSS). These usually require hospitalisation.

There are currently no vaccines for Dengue. Prevention of infection is to avoid mosquito bites. Prevention is possible if diagnosis occurs before the patient develops shock. There is no specific treatment for Dengue shock syndrome (DSS) or shock in blood pressure, heavy skin, weak pulse. Without proper treatment, DSS can be fatal. Dhariwal said: “Dengue shock syndrome (DSS) is a severe form of dengue. It can be fatal. Apart from symptoms of mild dengue fever, the person has: a) Intense stomach pain, b) Disorientation, sudden hypotension, or a fast drop in blood pressure, c) Heavy bleeding, d) Swollen lymph nodes or fluid in the body. Bland from the mouth, gums, or nose. Blood clots in the mouth, coughing up blood, and bleeding from the nose can lead to dry eyes. Without treatment, this can result in death.

If you spend much of the day staring at a computer screen, you're probably familiar with dry eye symptoms – itchy, scratchy, red, irritated eyes. The condition sensitivity and blurred vision. “Eyes, like any other part of your body, get used to what it needs eat,” says Dr Mukherjee. “Dry eye happens when your body is not able to produce enough tears.” The condition is common and can affect 1 in 10 people in the US. “Dhariwal said. “Dengue shock syndrome (DSS) is a severe form of dengue.
