I am working as a salarawan in a laun- dry shop on a limited contract since May 2013. Recently the company transferred me to their shop in a mall. The company is forcing me to work more than the regular working hours without compensation. When I objected to it, the company threatened me with termination unless I agree. Therefore, they can terminate me for not working on public holidays and they can discipline me from the Labour minister. To add to it, I am not getting time even for my lunch and they assured me that I would be paid extra for it. I requested them to inform me which I paid was never paid for the overtime. Now, the management has asked me to hand over the shop inventories, cash and key of the shop to the company. Which I did and informed them that I would hand over all those to any company officials, not the driver. What should I do?

For Gen Ins Cos provide mental illness coverage to one lakh people

For state-owned general insurance companies, mental illness is a new peril that has been covered under their products since April this year. This is a step towards the treatment of mental illness on the same basis as is available for physical illness.

In August 2018, Insurance Regulatory and Development Authority of India (IRDAI) asked insurers to cover mental illness as a peril after it issued a circular in 2018. The IRDAI had recommended cover for mental illness in the same period previous year.

Earlier, the regulator had advised insurers to ensure that the persons affected with mental illness are given “treatment similar to persons affected with physical illness.” Insurers have also been asked to provide financial assistance for medical expenses and ongoing care.

“Public sector general insurance companies have already covered mental illness under various products since 2018 under various products which include mental health, as is provided by the finance ministry to the Lok Sabha.
