UAE professionals expect salary hike

DUBAI: More than 50pc of working professionals across the country said they are expecting to receive a raise this year, new data by bayt.com has re- vealed. The research study conducted in partnership with YouGov, showed that 54pc of respondents expect to receive a raise in 2019, with 17pc expecting a raise of up to 10pc. In addition, 15pc of the respondents expect a raise in wage per five years.

In terms of salary, 61pc of respondents claim that their current salary pack- age consists of basic salary with benefits. While 21pc claim that it consists of basic salary only, 10pc said it consists of basic salary as well as benefits and “commission” as well as “bonus”. When it comes to the preferred pay structure, 54pc of UAE respondents said they prefer “fixed pay structure”, 34pc said it doesn’t matter “a ‘pam- per’ package with a salary in addition”, while eight per cent prefer “no additional benefit”.

Among the various ben- efits employees receive, personal medical insurance, transportation allowances, housing and family medical insurance are found to be the most desired. “Salary is an integral part of an employee’s reward and the basis for his salary evaluation,” said Oman Tahboub, general manager of HR at bahrain.com.

“We are constantly working on finding methods to improve our screening pro- cesses to protect our citizens, while supporting legitimate visa applicants,” the statement said.

The State Department regulations say people will have “to provide personal infor- mation names and five years worth of phone and bank numbers. When proposed last year, autho- rities in the US said it would affect 14.7 million people, including about 12pc of the diplomatic and official visa applicants, from the stringent new measures.

Even, people travelling to the US to study or work will have to hand over their passports, the BBC reported.

“US visa applicants should submit social media details

WASHINGTON: Nearly all applicants for US visas will have to submit their social media details under new rules by the Trump administration.

The State Department regulations say people will have “to provide personal infor- mation names and five years worth of phone and bank numbers. When proposed last year, autho- rities in the US said it would affect 14.7 million people, including about 12pc of the diplomatic and official visa applicants, from the stringent new measures.

Even, people travelling to the US to study or work will have to hand over their passports, the BBC reported.

“The Trump administra- tion first proposed the rules in March 2018. At the time, the Ameri- can Civil Liberties Union (ACLU) said there is no evidence that such social media monitors are effective. Moreover, it said it would cause people to self-censor.

But now applicants will say they prefer a “100pc count on a list of accounts or sites and also the details of their accounts on any sites they don’t list. Anyone who lies about their social media use could be subject to visa with- drawal. The Trump administra- tion is expected to issue a final rule on social media soon.”

Women with stomach cancer also have a higher risk of getting additional awareness of the foods that are linked to other chronic diseases, which could help prevent further chronic illness, according to a study published in the journal Cancer Epidemiology, Biomarkers & Prevention.

Dr. Xiaolin Xu, a PhD scholar in Health Psychology, suggested that depression and chronic disease, such as diabetes, heart disease, stroke, and cancer, are linked in studies. The research, published in the journal Clinical Psychological Science, found that women with depression were more likely to have chronic conditions, including diabetes, heart disease, and cancer.

“Depression impacts risk of multiple chronic diseases in women,” the researchers found. “Women with depression are more likely to develop multiple chronic diseases such as diabetes, heart disease, stroke, and cancer than women without depression.”

“Women who experience symptoms of depression are at greater risk of developing multiple chronic conditions, including diabetes, heart disease, stroke, and cancer, a study has found. The researchers, led by Dr. Xiaolin Xu, a PhD scholar at the University of Queensland in Australia, stated, “We looked at how women progress in the development of these chronic conditions before and after the onset of chronic illness,” Xu said. The study found 42 percent of women experiencing symptoms of depression before and after the onset of depression, the researchers reported, were diagnosed with cancer.

“This study has profound implications for clinical and sub-clinical depression (elevated depressive symptoms) can be linked to an increased risk of physical conditions,” he said. “Depression and chronic disease are at increased risk of depression and just under half of the participants were found to have depression, which is a chronic condition. Want to combine paid leave with Hajj leave?

I have been working in a private company in the mainland of Dubai for the last six years. I wish to go on Hajj pilgrimage this year, I am aware that I am entitled for 30 days' unpaid leave under the UAE Labour Law. However, my company offers 15 days of paid leave after Hajj special leave without pay for the purpose of fulfilling the obligation to make Haj pilgrimage, such leave shall not be counted towards any other periods of leave and shall not exceed 30 days. Therefore, you may approach your employer and seek their consent if you can combine other paid leave with the paid Hajh leave. Every employee shall be granted, once in the course of his period of service, special leave without pay for the purpose of fulfilling the obligation to make Haj pilgrimage, such leave shall not be counted towards any other periods of leave and shall not exceed 30 days.

Consequently, you are entitled to a maximum period of 45 days leave for Hajh leave. The Hajh Law is silent on whether you can combine such leave with any other leave.
